People who are addicted to crack cocaine and even pain killers go missing, and an 80-year-old man dies of cardiomyopathy, a heart disease that usually affects older adults. As reported by the WFAA-TV News in Texas, Bryant Bender entered a plea of guilty to the Class A Misdemeanor and received two year's deferred adjudication. The Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) will not press the charge, which is punishable by up to a $10,000 fine or 2 years in jail. The Department released the following statement: DPS Trooper Ginger LeBeau said the department received a report that a suspicious vehicle was parked near a residence in the 16100 block of Northeast 13th Street and investigators found the vehicle. The vehicle was registered to Richard Bryant in the 9900 block of Shennerville Road. Trooper LeBeau contacted the owner and found that the man was a relative of Bryant. The man explained to investigators that he had recently purchased the vehicle from the owner and that Bryant had no knowledge of what was in the vehicle. Investigators found a small amount of crack cocaine hidden in the vehicle. The man told investigators he did not call police about the cocaine. He also did not call police that night about being missing from his residence. The man was hospitalized for an undisclosed medical condition and was later arrested after admitting to a relative he had missed two prior appointments at a DPS office. Trooper LeBeau said Bryant will be required to undergo an evaluation at a state agency to determine his ability to drive. Q: How to name an argument in Objective-C I have a method in Objective-C which may not always have the same number of arguments (and even if it does, I don't know how many). Anyway, it's a sort of "record debugging" method, as I read about it in the book Programming iOS: The Big Nerd Ranch Guide. Here's how I call the method, - (void)log:(NSString*) message withLine:(int) line { NSLog(@" %d:%d:%s", self, line, message); } I really dislike the way I have to name the arguments (line and message), but I couldn't find out another way to call the method. So, how can I name the arguments? A: I suggest that
